

Trip Description

Headquartered in beautiful Moab, Utah (elevation 4,085 ft.), the Moab Odyssey takes you on a journey through some of the most picturesque landscapes in America, while providing attendees the experience of world-class off-roading. Leading your group will be an elite hand-selected Trail Guide team by Jeep Jamboree USA. The group will be guaranteed plenty of personal attention and given expert driving instruction and guidance along the way.

Group members will need to make their way to the Hoodoo hotel located in heart of downtown Moab for a welcome orientation and dinner. Upon arrival at the Hoodoo hotel, you'll be greeted by a representative of Jeep Jamboree USA that will assist you with check-in to your pre-assigned rooms.

Your group will spend the next three-days tackling some of the most iconic off-road trails in Moab, including Badge of Honor trails Metal Masher, Steel Bender & Top of the World. The La Sal Mountain range provides a scenic backdrop for your daily trail rides. Part of the Manti-La Sal National Forest, the La Sal Mountain range reaches nearly 13,000 feet, these alpine mountains are the second highest mountain range in Utah. Your evenings will be spent relaxing and sharing stories with fellow participants.

All of the amazing scenery in this part of the world is why Moab has such a rich history of filmmaking. However, seeing it on the big screen is one thing, experiencing it for yourself will fill you with enough memories to last a lifetime.

Fred Williams - Your Trip Host

Fred Williams has over 20 years experience in the four-wheel drive and off-road automotive industry. As an automotive journalist he has held the role of Feature editor, Technical editor, Editor in Chief, and Editor at Large for Petersen's 4Wheel & Off-Road magazine. In those roles Fred specialized in writing and photography of new product reviews, new 4x4 vehicle testing, motorsports, project vehicle builds, and adventure drives.

Fred has been involved in all aspects of off-roading from rock crawling and trails to mud, snow, sand and overland type driving. Plus, he has built vehicles to enjoy all these different terrains and adventures. After a long tenure with print and digital media Fred also expanded into video with developing, writing, and hosting the successful Motor Trend program Dirt Every Day. With a 10-year run this show reached millions of fans as Fred and his cohost Dave built wild and exciting 4x4's each episode before heading out on a fun test drive adventure in the dirt. Some episodes include cheap truck challenge, a 4x4 motorhome build, overlanding on mini-bikes and driving his trusty Jeep Tube Sock 12 feet under water.

Fred can currently be found on social media and YouTube where he continues to bring fun vehicle builds and his spirit of adventure to fans around the world with shows like Dirt Daily, the Dirt Daily News, First Drives with Fred and In the Kitchen with Fred.

- TOP OF THE WORLD (RED)

A photograph of a natural rock arch in Moab, Utah. The arch is made of reddish-brown sandstone and frames a view of a desert landscape. In the distance, there are more rock formations, including one with a smaller arch. The sky is blue with scattered white clouds, and a thin crescent moon is visible in the upper left. The foreground shows the rough, layered texture of the rock. The text "Moab, Utah" is centered in the middle of the image.
